

These results would suggest greater subsurface transport rates for both OCDD and 1,2,3,4,6,7,8 HpCDD relative to that of 2,3,7,8-TCDD than expected if R_d were to vary in approximate proportion with octanol-water partitioning coefficients (K_{ow}). Transport facilitated by dissolved solvents is suspected.

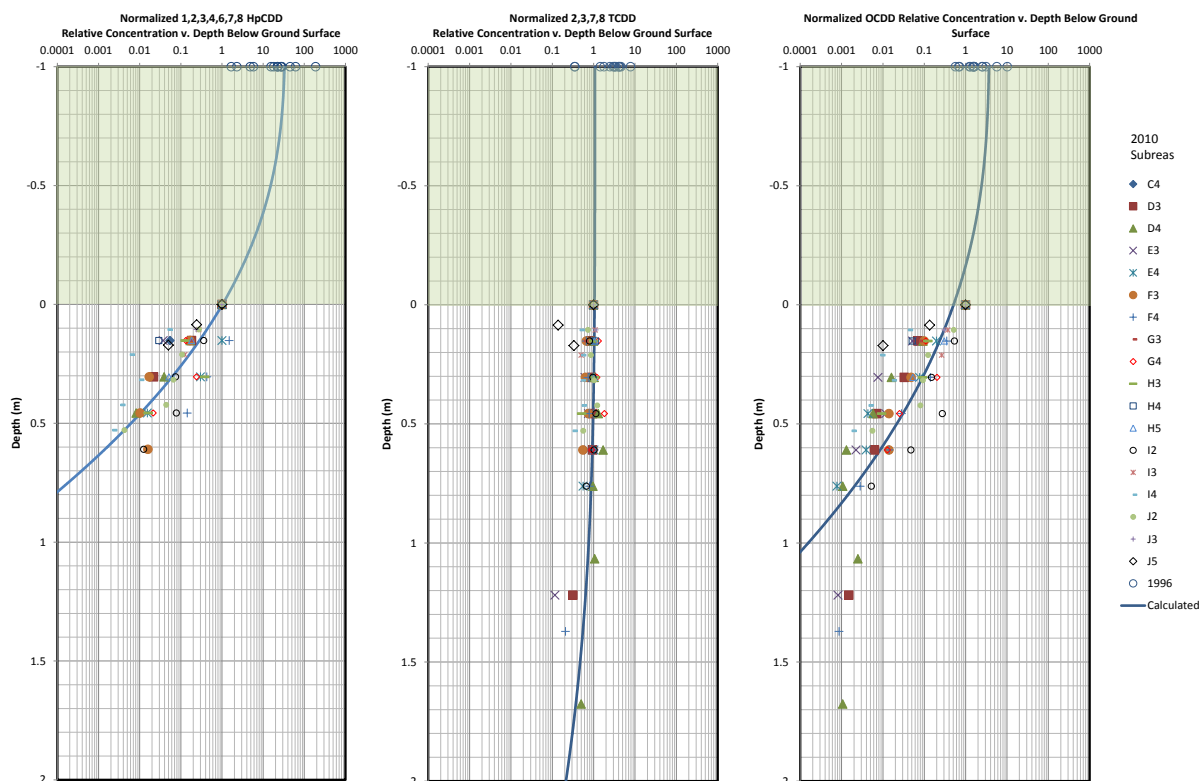

Figure 2. Relative Concentration Measurements v. Depth

Acknowledgements:

MCG Geotechnical Engineering Inc. provided funding for the preparation and presentation of this paper. <http://www.mcggeotechnical.com/>

References:

1. Blancato, J., D. Cleverly, R. Fares, G. Huse, M. Lorber, J. Schaum, G. Schweer, AND P. White. Estimating Exposure to Dioxin-Like Compounds. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C., EPA/600/6-88/005B (NTIS PB95148193).
2. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, Technical Memorandum No.11, Krejci Dump Site Supplemental Soil Sampling Plan, Dioxin/Furan Investigations, Memorandum to Mr. Richard Smith, Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, Northeast District Office, 2110 Aurora Road, Twinsburg OH, Sept. 27, 1996. <http://www.mcggeotechnical.com/> (see Documents tab)
3. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation Technical Memorandum, Krejci Dump Data Transmittal, Dioxin Sampling, Memorandum to Mr. Richard Smith, Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, Northeast District Office, 2110 Aurora Road, Twinsburg OH, December 12, 1996. <http://www.mcggeotechnical.com/>
4. U.S. National Park Service, Data Usability Report 3, Cleanup Verification Sampling Data, Krejci Dump Site, Cuyahoga Valley National Park, Summit County, Ohio, Prepared by: MCG Geotechnical Engineering, Inc. 4817 South Zang Way, May 2012. <http://www.mcggeotechnical.com/>
5. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, Final Remedial Investigation Report, Krejci Dump Site, Cuyahoga Valley National Recreation Area, prepared for the National Park Service by the Bureau of Reclamation, Lakewood CO. June 2000
6. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. 2002. Record of Decision, Krejci Dump Site, Cuyahoga Valley National Park, September 2001.